2019 in Review
Research and innovation are core to the identity and purpose of a university.

At Strathmore University, we are always pushing the boundaries of new knowledge and experiences.

For this reason, I am pleased to present to you our research and innovation report for 2019.

This document contains details about our activities, across various aspects of research and innovation, in that year, organised into three major domains.

The first domain is publications, which are the primary output of research, an essential tool for the documentation and communication of findings with peers and with the public.

In 2019, our researchers published 43 papers in peer-reviewed journals. Unfortunately, this represents the first decline in the number of publications published within one year since we started keeping records.

We do not anticipate that the decline will continue, but we reiterate our commitment to become the best we can be in this area.

We also published nine book chapters and presented 63 papers at various conferences in Kenya and around the world.

The second domain, grants, showed encouraging growth, with our researchers winning 32 new grants over the course of the year, up from 30 in the previous year.

The final domain, that of research-related events, like conferences, symposia and workshops, also saw real growth in the year.

I hope that, as you read this report, you will be inspired to continue doing the work you do, or, if you are not already affiliated with SU, that you will find areas of common interest in which we can partner in future.
